

Where Did America Move In 2014?

Nation Domination: Texas on Top, West Coast on the Rise in Allied Van Lines Report

Moving In, Moving Out: Inbound and Outbound States in 2014

The Allied Van Lines Magnet States report shows trends in U.S. migration patterns using internal data to compare inbound and outbound moves by Allied Van Lines, one of the world's largest moving companies. Texas topped the list as the most magnetic state, with a gain of 1,973 households.

California Is Most Mobile State

Allied conducted more than 14,000 moves that featured California as its departure or destination state. An outbound state in 2013, this year California earned a spot on the inbound state list, coming in 15th.

Go West, Young Man — West Coast Sees Gains in 2014

California, Oregon and Washington State all showed significant pull for new moves, and both California and Washington became inbound states in 2014.

Texas Is King — 10 Years as Top Magnet State

2014 marks a full decade of Magnet States dominance for Texas. Others in the top 5 are Florida (2), Arizona (3), South Carolina (4) and Colorado (5).

Shuffling the Bottom of the Deck

Illinois, Pennsylvania, New York, Michigan and New Jersey have the dubious honor as top outbound states in 2014. Since 2010, the same 5 states have laid claim to the bottom of the list, though in different order. This year, Illinois takes the lead with 1,372 outbound moves.
